History

The legend that is now known as Monteith's Brewing Company began in the mid-1800s when a gold rush drew 30,000 adventurers to the rugged West Coast of New Zealand's South Island. Prospectors always welcomed a satisfying beer at the end of a hard day. Thankfully there were plenty of choices with over 300 pubs on the West Coast!

From humble origins in 1868, the Monteith's family-owned Phoenix Brewery became the Coast's most popular brewer for its strong tasting, full-bodied ale. The Phoenix Brewery later merged with a group of small breweries to form the Westland Brewing Company, predecessor to today's Monteith's Brewing Company. Monteith's has been crafting its family of fine beers for over 140 years, staying true to the authentic process and recipes of the classic beer styles that they re-create. Renowned the world over, Monteith's continues to produce beers that are made to exacting standards and capture the spirit of the world's most famous beers and, in some cases, forgotten favorites.

The Monteith's Brewery is going strong and continuing with the same brewing traditions almost 150 years on from its inception. Along with coal-fired boilers there are open fermenters that allow the brewer to see and smell the beer as it slowly matures. Their brewers carefully nurture the beer by hand in small batches to coax out the full natural flavors. When the beer finally emerges, it is of such high quality that the bottles are filled without pasteurization to keep the natural aroma and taste intact.
